PETER CHAMBERS The TV dad who's got us all talking

Who's Peter Chambers? Renowned for one of the most famous TV roles ever, he's now become a dad and a dad-to-be

By Helen Fospero | 10 May 2012 | 10:00am

IT'S been a year since Peter Chambers' character, Steve McDonald, was last seen on our screens. But the man behind the mask has been busy, and he's got us all talking again.

After a year off from the small screen, Peter has returned to TV as the dad of two-year-old daughter, Poppy, in the new Channel 4 soap, Emmerdale.

He's also got a new son on the way, due in July, and he's been cast in a new BBC drama, Death in Paradise, which premieres on June 11.

It's been a whirlwind year for the 49-year-old dad, so we caught up with him to find out what's been keeping him so busy.

How has it been being a dad? "It's been brilliant," he says. "I've had a great time with Poppy. She's a real character, she's cheeky and she's got a great sense of humour."

What's been the best part of being a dad? "It's been great to see her grow and develop. She's learning new things every day and it's wonderful to see her smile and laugh."

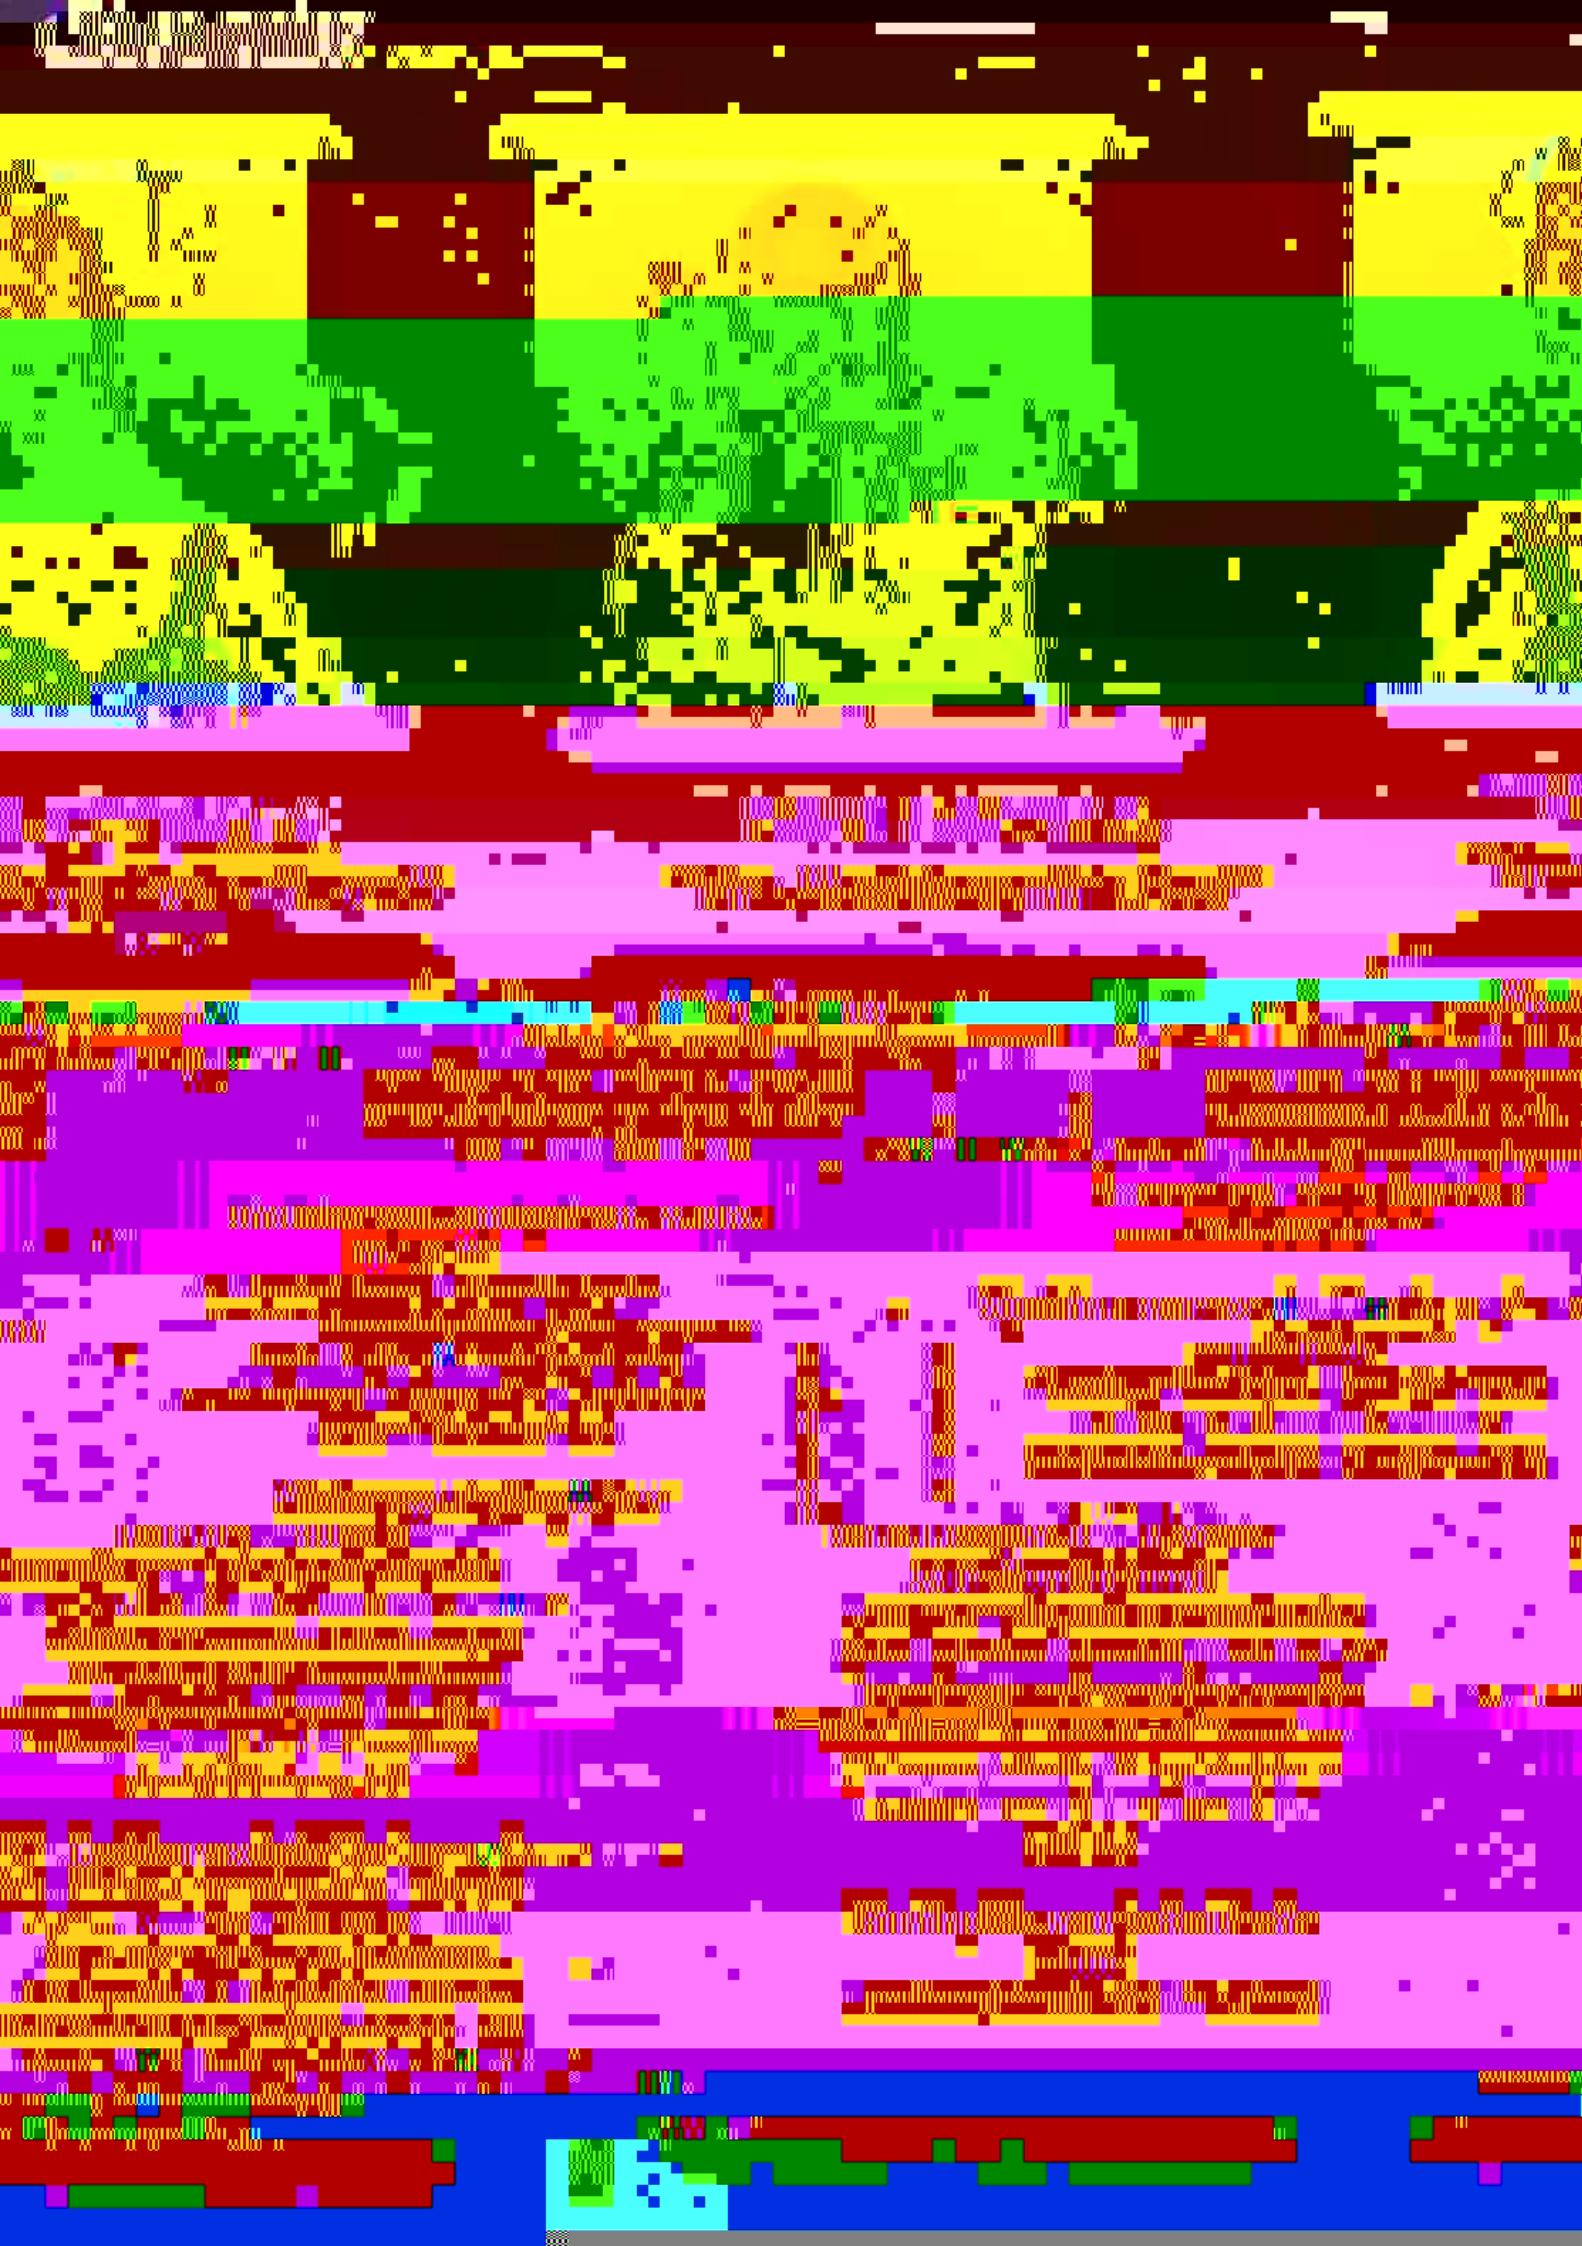

What's been the hardest part of being a dad? "It's been challenging at times, especially when she's been sick or when I've had to work late. But I've always tried to make sure I'm there for her when she needs me."

What's next for Peter? "I'm looking forward to continuing to work on Emmerdale and Death in Paradise. I'm also hoping to do some more acting in the future, so watch this space!"

The distribution is highly skewed, with most SNPs clustered in a few specific regions (hotspots) and many fewer SNPs in between.
